GL21 Special Panel Session

Twenty-First International Conference on Grey Literature

The Open Science Publishing Flood and Collaborative Authoring

Simon Worthington — TIB Hannover, Germany
Daniel Speicher — Bonn-Aachen Int. Center for Information Technology
Denis Roio (Jaromil) — Dyne.org Foundation, Netherlands
Thomas Fricke — Endocode AG, Germany
Ludwig Hülk — Reiner Lemoine Institut gGmbH, Germany

Currently there is a deluge of 'off-piste' collaborative authoring going on in Open Science, the adoption of: software versioning systems like GitHub for writing; simulations and code in platforms like Jupyter; or in 'real time' web authoring 'operational transformation algorithm' based software like Etherpad. Yes, the 'digital plumbing' of this publishing flood is just not in place. How do we ID these documents, reuse them for example? These questions have been asked and answered before, but are outside the fast moving, forward looking tech world. As an example, Ted Nelson coined the term 'transclusion' (Nelson 1987) back in the '80s. Transclusion is a step on from the 'hyperlink', another Nelson term, where not just the link of a target is included in a document but instead the whole content (AKA live linked embedding). Currently if you want to link and include another document fragment in your document with persistence, it's unlikely to work. The panelists will explore how this exciting field can better support research. http://www.textrelease.com/gl21program.html

First of its Kind Forum on the Circular Economy and Grey Literature

Organized by GreyNet International with the Amsterdam based platform gocirularnow.com

An upcoming seminar in the GreyForum Series will look at grey literature not only as an important vehicle for the circular economy but will also demonstrate its part in the information industry alongside other industries embedded in a circular economy.

Grey Literature as a vehicle is foremost responsible for the knowledge transfer required to raise awareness to the circular economy. And, it is this that is required to bring about needed change in the mindset required for its implementation. Industries like that of information appear to have remained until now on the periphery.

Grey literature encompasses a range of diverse types of multidisciplinary and sustained information resources that allow for innovative solutions to barriers incorporated in a linear, ownership-based information industry. Grey Literature is open access compliant, exploits the reuse and enhancement of existing resources, and seeks to preserve the knowledge contained therein for both science and society.
